On Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia, Aug. 25 (UPI).—Cambodian troops early today broke up another major Communist assault against Phnom Penh's defensive network after seven hours of close-quarter fighting against superior numbers of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. Military spokesmen said 1.500 Cambodian defenders haited the attack by an estimated 3,000 Com-munist troops shortly before dawn at a point nine miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

The communiqué said the Communist troops left behind "numer-ous bodies" as yet uncounted. The battle at Prek Tameak was the second in less than a week. In fighting there six days ago.

Peace Talks On; Jarring Meets Mideast Envoys

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 25 (NYT).-The most concerted diplomatic effort in 22 years to bring a formal peace settle-ment to the Middle East was launched here today amid guarded expressions of optimism by all the parties.

This new and thus far apparently most promising phase in the long history of Middle Eastern peace-making attempts opened at the UN headquarters building when Gunnar V. Jarring, the special representative for the Middle East of Secretary-General Thant, conferred in separate sessions with the representatives of Israel. Jordan and Egypt.

Mr. Thant told newsmen that he was "cautiously optimistic" and "definitely" more so than a year ago, while Israel's Ambassador Yosef Tekoah, Jordan's Ambassador Abdul Hamid Sharaf and Egypt's Ambassador Mohamed Hassan el-Zayyat said after meeting successively with Mr. Jarring that their governments were determined to do everything possible to achieve success in the

Tekoah Going to Israel

Although Mr. Jarring set a lively pace for his activities today in conferring with all the three envoys, the rhythm of the peace talks here is expected to slow down during the balance of the week as a result of Mr. Tekoah's departure for Jerusalem this evening for consultations with his government.

Mr. Tekoah said be would be away from New York for "the time it takes for the consultations"—he would not say how long they may last—and indicated that Israel would not be represented in his absence by other diplomats in talks with Mr. Jarring,

The delicacy and complexity of the new discussions-held against the background of a tenuous truce between Israel and Jordan and Egypt since Aug. 7-were quickly emphasized by Mr. Emerging from his second conference during the day with Mr.

Jarring, the Israeli diplomat said that "one of the best ways" for the Arabs "to prove their sincerity and desire for peace would be to terminate their violations of the cease-fire."

Israel has charged that Egypt has repeatedly violated the truce by moving forward anti-alreraft missile batteries into the cease-fire zone on the Egyptian side of the Suez Canal-In a letter of complaint distributed here today and eddressed to Ambassador Eugeniusz Kulaga of Poland, this month's president of the Security Council, Mr. Tekoah accused Jordan of allowing 105 "acts of aggression" to be launched against Israel from its territory since the beginning of the cease-fire.

Those attacks apparently consisted of shellings of Israeli border settlements by Palestinian guerrillas. Questioned by news-

Truce Reciprocal, Eban Warns

JERUSALEM, Aug. 25 (UPI). -Foreign Minister Abba Eban said today Israel may adopt a tit-for-tat policy in the face of Egyptian violations of the Aug. 7 Suez Canal cease-fire.

Mr. Eban was replying in the Knesset (parliament) to motions filed by three opposition parties, including the hawkish Gahal hloc, seeking to air the current crisis in Israeli-American relations over the Egyptian-Soviet buildup in the Suez Canal zone.

Mr. Eban said Israel has so far filed five complaints alleging "grave" Egyptian violations of the cease-fire implicit in the American peace plan

He said Egypt's violations of the cease-fire created an entirely new military balance of power in the Middle East. They also place a question mark on any further pledges or commitments the Soviet Union and Egypt may make, he said. Israel might consider that further Soviet-Egyptian commitments contain a guarantee against further breaches, he said. Mr. Eban said Israel was maintaining contacts with the United States on the problem. He told parliament the American-Israeli dialogue centered around three points:

• The Israeli demand that the United States exert pressure on the Soviet Union to restore the military status quo in the Suez Canal zone by removing newly installed SAM-2 missile batteries. • U.S. recognition of the urgency of Israell requests for additional weaponry in the face of the Egyptian cease-fire viola-• That the observance of the military standstill in the Suez Canal zone is reciprocal. He thus intimated that if infringements of the cease-fire continue, Israel might strike back.

Replying to critics as to why Israel appointed a representative to the first round of the Middle East peace talks in New York under UN envoy Gunnar V. Jarring before the problem of Egyptian violations of the cease-fire was resolved, Mr. Eban said Israel stood to gain nothing by delaying the appointment. "This would not have removed any single Soviet battery position," he said. "There is no substitute for an agreed peace" he said. Alluding to Sen. J. William nor enhanced Israel's military Fulbright's suggestion of American guarantees for Israel's pre-June 1967 boundaries, Mr. Eban said: "The only solution is a contractual and binding peace settlement. Any plan to re-turn to the June 4, 1967, borders and the return of the Arab refugees to Palestine would endanger Israel's security." The house, by an overwhelm-ing vote, accepted Mr. Eban's suggestions that the motions be referred for discussion to the parliamentary Foreign Affairs and Security Committee. Referring to recent Israeli complaints over alleged Egyptian cease-fire violations, Mr.

"We know that the United Stetes has taken up our complaints with Cairo end we also know the United States is convinced that our complaints are well substantiated."

He said Israel would continue to expose Egyptian violations of the cease-fire as "one of the means of preventing their re-

5 Young Poles Take Over Ship, Sail to Denmark

ROENNE, Denmark, Aug. 25 (UPI).—Five young Poles took over a Polish fishing trawler in the Baltic today and sailed the vessel to the Danish island of Bornholm, where they asked for political asylum, police said.

The Poles, between 18 and 24 years of age, said that they took over the trawler after a fight with the skipper and three other

The defectors were brought to Copenhagen for questioning.

A police spokesman said that one of the crewmen had smuggled four of his friends aboard the trawler in Darlowo, Poland. When they were one hour out to sea, the crewman and his friends appeared on deck and took over the vessel after a fight with the skipper and other crew members, the defectors said. The captain asked the Danish police to arrest the defectors but his request was turned down. The trawler later left Bornholm

China has stepped up its aid. And they put increasing reliance on backing from the radical Arab rulers of Iraq.

All this apparently reflects the guerrilla leaders' growing sense of isolation in recent weeks as Egypt and the Soviet Union and their allies have thrown their weight behind efforts toward a peaceful Middle East settlement which would be at the guerrillas' expense. . . The increasingly close ties ultra-leftists are made up partly of shared anti-American and anti-Soviet teachings. Another, and important, ingredient is the old Arab view that "the enemy of my enemy is my friend."

Where the Black Panthers came from was not disclosed, but the Panthers grouped around Eldridge Cleaver, their fugitive minister of information in Algiers have been in touch with the commando movement.

The main guerrilla leader Yassir Arafat, was said by wellplaced Palestinians to have met Cleaver in Algiers in the past, and some Panthers were reported to have been receiving training at el-Fatah camps in Jordan last year.

The el-Fatab spokesman, who is known as Wadle, said the Panthers were here "for a visit only."

Mr. Wadie denied published reports that the commandos had given the Panthers training last year. He said, "The revolutionary has to be trained by himself; it is very far from America to here."

By this he meant this the conditions for mounting guerrilla warfare are different in the United States from what they are in this area. But he hastened to add, "This doesn't mean that the commandos won't (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

It was evident that some Korean officials were not entirely unhappy at the snags which embarrassed Mr. Agnew on the first stop of his Asian tour. ## Sen. Tydings Again Accuses 2 Nixon Aides

By John Hanrahan

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25 (WP) .-Sen. Joseph D. Tydings. D., Md., charged yesterday that "persons in the White House Itself" worked with Life magazine to fabricate charges that he used his influence as a senator to advance his private financial interests.

In his second press conference in four days to deny allegations made by Life in its current issue, Sen. Tydings said that he has asked his attorneys to "look into the grounds for a libel suit" against the magazine. - He charged that Life "made oo effort to really develop the facts."

Sen. Tydings, seeking election to a second term, faces a vigorous nrimary fight from George P. Mahoney, and, if he survives that, a strong challenge from the Re-drums, from an artistic point of view, there are two summer shows of considerable interest currently on view in London.

At Compendium 2, 137 Ful-ism Road, S.W. 3, is an exhibition entitled Taces on the Clee The Clee is the hill district in southern Shropshire, the border county between Eng-land and Wales and the four artists showing here—Johnson Lamputt, Mason and Tarrant (who seem to have revived the Slade School of Art custom of surnames only)—are all Shropshire born and trained.

It is exciting to find four painters drawing upon their own countryside for inspiration, without in any sense being landscape painters as such. They turn to their village neighbors, the rechise with his cats, the local peacher, the landed gentry outside their country houses, for the personages in their lively figurations. They update local legends, situate the Earthly Paradise in a Shropshire valley, and paint self-portraits centered in fantastic agglomerations of local imagery, some real, some surreal. "Faces on the Clee" demonstrates very clearly that English.

SALZBURG: A Festival for the Record

By David Stevens

ه کوامن الاحل

CALZBURG, Austria.—One of the signs of the times here during the festival periodaside from the flood of tourists attracted by this baroque city's extra-musical beauty—is the overhelming presence of the major recording companies. whose promotional displays have a virtual monopoly on wall and window space in the city's

They dominate the store windows to such an extent that the entire business district gives the impression of being one big record shop. One Salzburg merchant, a purveyor of garden hoses and like equipment, had to counteract the effect of his window displays by putting up a sign to announce that "We do'nt sale records."

But the recording industry makes itself felt in more direct, if less obvious waye. One Vien-nese critic preceded a laudatory review of the lieder recital that joined the talents of Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau and Sviztoslav Richter with the somewhat testy acknowledgement that their presence together on the festival program may have been due principally to the fact that they had just recorded the same program together.

But the question of whether the public performance or the recording comes first is probably of little consequence to the music lover who can enjoy one or the other, or both. And the two recording industry giants-Deutsche Grammophou and Electrical and Musical Industries —marked the festival's 50-year jubilee with two-disc issues closely bound to recent and past Salzburg Festival history. The German firm has issued a recording of Cavalieri's "Rappresentatione di Anima e di Corpo," the 370-year-old relithe sleeper of the 1968 festival. The records can only hint at the beauty of the production in

The controversial opera, under fire because of a chorus of three nude nuns, opened Edinburgh's three-week music festival. The city council, sponsor of the festival, breathed deeply in relief. Three young ladies playing the part of bare-bosomed nuns did not even create a ripple in the jammed auditorium of the King's Theater. Music was the thing.

Soprano Silja and baritone Constantin of Frankfurt's municipal opera were the targets of shouted "bravos" and the normally reticent Scotsmen beat their hands red.

"Everything went well," said Charles Nicholas, the festival ookesman. "No one was offended. It vindicated our decision to bring this fine opera to Edinburgh." More than 100,000 tourists are estimated to have crowded into Edinburgh to see festival events that encompass everything from symphony concerts to rock musicals, during 130 performances crammed into three weeks. There are also 60 theatrical groups giving unofficial performances during the festival.

THEATER: Four by Rattigan

Rattigan, who will have four plays in London this fall.

This is Mr. Rattigan's first work for the theater in seven years and it revolves about the romance of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson. The "bequest" of the title is that made by Nelson to king and country in his mistress's behalf—that after his death "they give her an ample provision to maintain her rank in life." Heading the cast are Ian Holme as the naval hero and Zoe Caldwell, who abandoned a Broadway hit in which she was playing the French novelist Colette for the role of Lady Hamilton. Mr. Rattigan, who has established residence in Bermuda, is prior to the London opening. He plete a duo of shorter plays to compose a double bill on the order of his earlier "Browning Version" and "Separate Tables." "I am considering Life and Soul' as their overall title," remarked the Harrow-Oxfordeducated author of "French Without Tears," "Ross" and The Deep Blue Sea." "But as they are by me—and not by it may be Life and Soul (of the Party)'." Mcanwhile, a revival of an-other Rattigan play, "The Winslow Boy," is opening in Brighton this week. It is based on the celebrated Archer-Shee case, and treats of a British father's long legal battle to clear his 14-year-old son of charge of having stolen a small sum of money while at the Osborne Naval Academy, Kenneth More is playing the crafty prosecution lawyer who confronts the accused boy. The play is London-bound and the West End will thus be seeing coming season.

During the long absence from the theater, Mr. Rattigan has. scarcely been idle. He has been occupied chiefly with screen writing "The VIPs," "The Yellow Rolls-Royce," the remake of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and an as-yet-unfilmed script for a ballet musical. Two years ago, he wrote the television spectacle for BBC about Lord Nelson that inspired the stage ver-news of Nelson's death reached London," he explained.

"I have tried to picture Nelson's complex moods, his genius as a leader and his obsessive passion for Emma Hamilton despite his awareness that to others she seemed a who was making them both ridiculous. The portrait of Emma is unromantic but sympathetic. It differs, of course, from the usual one, that of the English rose beauty of the Romney canvases and the 'divine lady' of the Corinne Griffith movie. There is also a portrait of 'poor Tom-Tit,' the crippled Frances Nelson, seen by the world as the loyal wife shamefully deserted, but whose enduring love and forgiveness proved for Nelson the ultimate bru-

"Now about the hrace of new plays." continued Mr. Rattigan. 'I have only finished the first so I can only describe that It will be called My Proud Beauty' and will be the 'Life' of the party; the second-'Soul'—is to be a serious drama about the deceptive relations that part a couple.
"My Proud. Beauty is a spool of Sardou's 'Tosca.' By introducing humor-or even a bit of common sense-a playwright can turn melodrams into farce. In my version, Tosca finds that the villain, Scarpia, who holds her captive, demandlover's life, is a more interesting man than her lover."

Classic Inspiration

Mr. Rattigan, widely regarded as a master of theatrical construction, has probably profited more from his study of Greek classic drama and Shakespeare than from the well-made play models of Sardon and Pinero. He believes all modern dramatists are the children of either Ibsen or Chekhov.

"I write under the Ibsen influence," he said. "Tennessee Williams, on the other hand, is Chekhovian in manner. Of the practicing playwrights in English, I admire Williams and John Osborne especially his Inadmissible Evidence'-more than the others. Both have shown flashes of greatness, though as yet I don't suppose either has written a great play. Joe Orton was an author of many promises. When I saw his first play, Entertaining Mr. Sloan, I saw at once that it was written on the lines of classic comedy. Few recognize this, but I was not surprised when I met Orton to find that Aristophanes was his model."

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—This is how reviewers for The New York Times saw the new films:

"Eldridge Cleaver," which pened without warning in New York Monday, is a "generally intelligent, wholly sympathetic treatment of the thoughts and personality of Eldridge Cleaver in exile in Algiers." reports Roger Greenspun. "Insofar as Cleaver is the subject, the film is thoughtful, fronic, valuable. Insofar as Johnson, Reagan, Nixon, Agnew and the 'crimes of American imperialism' are the subjects, the film is very tired and very ordinary prop-aganda," Directed by William Klein ("Mr. Freedom," "Float Like a Butterfly, Sting Like a Bee, an episode of "Far From Vietnam"), the film consists at its best of interviews with and scenes from Cleaver's Algerian exile. He emerges as a man of considerable wit, grace, personal sadness and hard-headed realism. ### Fulbright on the Mideast

No senator has more consplcuously urged United States disengagement in Southeast Asia than J. W. Fulbright. That stand, plus his influence as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has focused world attention on Mr. Fulbright's surprise proposals for settling the Arab-Israeli conflict in the Middle East.

The central element in his plan is that this country back up a Mideast peacenegotiated or imposed—by a military guarantee to safeguard Israel's independence within the borders it had before the six-day war of June 1967. The proffer of soch a guarantee is doubly startling in the light of Sen. Fulbright's long coolness to Zionism and his continuing doubt that the Mideast is an area of vital American concern.

All these factors entitle the Fulbright proposal to recognition as an effort to be constructive in an area where ingrained mistrust constitutes a major handicap to any settlement. That mistrust would be intractable enough if it were confined to relations between the Arabs and the Israelis, but it is made worse by the area's emergence as a cockpit in the cold war and by the slack respect all nations now have for the police powers of the United Nations Security Coun-

The unfortunate aspect of the senator's proposals is that they may undermine, rather than facilitate, the peace talks under way at the UN. The goal of these talks is to arrive at an agreement to which both the Arabs and the Israelis will voluntarily sobscribe. Mr. Fulbright all but rules out that possibility and moves on to the next step of a settlement "imposed" by the Security Council-another way of saying by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Even though the senator stresses that he would welcome a similar imposed peace in Southeast Asia, the impact on the Mideast talks is likely to be a heightened reluctance on the part of the Egyptians and the Jordanians ever to get into the same room with the Israelis, much less to agree on peace terms. For Israel, the Fulbright plan entails a virtual advance renunciation of any hope for negotiating more defensible borders and thus reducing the danger of future clashes. All the skill put by Secretary of State Rogers into permitting some basis for flexibility on this point could be erased by the Fulbright insistence on restoration of the old bound-

The task that faces Ambassador Jarring in carrying the forthcoming negotiations to success is incredibly difficult at best. Unquestionably, he will need moch help from Washington and Moscow in keeping the talks from collapsing. The near-disaster that attended Egyptian movement of Soviet missiles into the zone just west of the Suez Canal on the night of the standstill ceasefire was evidence of how tenuous the whole undertaking is. At this stage the most useful service anyone in Washington, Moscow or other capitals can provide is to back up the Jarring mission.

Useful Mission to Mexico

If all presidential trips abroad could accomplish as much in short order as Mr. Nixon's 28-hour visit to Mexico, the case for personal diplomacy at the highest level would be unanswerable. Actually, the ground had been laboriously prepared for the agreement designed to resolve remaining boundary disputes between the United States and Mexico and to set up machinery for heading off such quarrels in the foture.

The basic climate had been created through earlier resolution of the centuryold dispute over the Chamizal area on the Rio Grande between El Paso, Texas, and Ciudad Juarez. Negotiations for the Chamizal convention were launched by Presidents Kennedy and Lopez Mateos in 1962 and brought to fruition by Presidents Johnson and Diaz Ordaz in 1967.

These bits of recent history are recalled not to diminish the accomplishment of Presidents Nixon and Diaz Ordaz at Puerto Vallarta, but to point up the invaluable continuity that bas been built op for amicable relations between the two countries cent years. That continuity dangered last year when Washington embarked on "Operation Intercept," a drive to halt the flow of marijuana and narcotics from Mexico.

Fortunately, the administration soon abandoned this ham-handed venture and the two governments agreed to replace it with "Operation Cooperation," under which Mexico promised to intensify its efforts to curb prodoction and export of narcotics. In the improved climate, Attorney General John Mitchell accompanied Mr. Nixon to Puerto Vallarta and agreed on new measures of cooperation against the drug traffic.

Finally, Mr. Nixon has made what Mr. Diaz Ordaz calls a "constructive" proposal for improving the agreement involving distribotion of the waters of the lower Colorado River. If a new agreement satisfactory to both sides can be reached by the time the old one expires in November, Mr. Nixon will have even more cause to be pleased with his personal diplomacy south of the Rio

International Opinion

The Fulbright Proposal

Sen. Fulbright's proposal is interesting in many respects: 1) Because the senator is not a friend of Israel or Zionism, and 2) Becaose he is known for his violent opposition to any further U.S. involvement abroad.

What he proposes—naturally after a total Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories —is actually a formal guarantee, a mutual defense treaty between Washington and Jerusalem of the type of those which he said the United States should no longer sign under any circumstances. This proposal, the Israelis say, shows indeed that the senator realizes the impossibility of asking Israel to leave the occupied territories with the sole guarantee of the UN or of the big powers. . .

It is interesting to note that Sen. Fulbright's rather surprising proposal coincides with some renewed Soviet interest in direct talks between Moscow and Jerusalem.

-From Le Figaro (Paris). * * *

Sen. Fulbright's Middle East plan is inopportune to the point of irresponsibility, and for the rest characteristically halfbaked. At the present early and fragile state of the cease-fire there are two overriding requirements. First, America, instead of just telling Israel to stop making a lot of fuss about nothing, must stop what appear to be flagrant and continuing Russian and Egyptian violations.

Second, the two sides must gradually and patiently be brought from preliminary diplomatic sparring into increasingly direct negotiations. The crude instant-package solution for all the most explosive issoes that the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has just lobbed out of his Washington window is about as constructive as a hand-grenade.

His demands for withdrawal from Vietnam regardless of the consequences and for a general cutting of commitments hardly makes him, in Israeli eyes, a convincing advocate for complete reliance on American

If Israel is to make significant withdrawals, the only guarantee that she can accept is not only one from America, but one supported by the stationing of American troops -with or without blue helmets-in adequate numbers at key points (Egypt already has 10.000 Russians).

There is no other way in the Middle East. The stronger Israel is, the less the risk. It is already greater than it need have been if Russian direct intervention had been matched, and so deterred, by America. It must not be allowed to grow-not so much as by another SAM site.

-From the Daily Telegraph (London). * * *

The proposals for a Middle East peace settlement which have just been put forward-with brilliant timing-by Sen, Fulbright are both wise and valuable because they offer both the Arabs and the Israelis the most that they can reasonably and realistically desire.

The detail has not yet been suggested, and moch of it would be acutely difficult to work out. Nor, most important, has the attitude of President Nixon and Congress to so major a proposition been clarified, since it appears that the cenator is not reflecting any official thinking. What is unmistakable is that the Arab and Israeli diplomats, as they begin their negotiations in New York, and thus the Arab and Israeli peoples, have been offered a peace plan which is far more worthy of their attention than time-consuming and ultimately unimportant squabbles about the movement of missiles a couple of kilometers to or from the canal.

Washington's Official Worriers

this place the American command

WASHINGTON.—The boss is away but the official mice are not playing in Washington. They are worrying about the end-less frustrations of Vietnam, not so much about the military situation, but about the consequences of what they regard as their growing successes in Southeast Asia. They are increasingly worried, for example, about the economic, psychological and political con-sequences of the American withdrawal from Saigon-particularly Vietnamese congressional and pres-idential elections. Inflation in South Vietnam, acording to one cabinet minister in Washington, is now increasing by 25 percent per year. The South Victnamese peasants and comnercial entrepreneurs are very well, but the wages of the South Vietnamese armed forces are steadily falling behind the in-"The military in Saigon," says this U.S. cabinet official, "are being asked to do more and more but the more they do, the less they are being paid in relative terms."

The same is true, he adds, for the South Vietnamese civil servants and many non-agricultural workers. As the U.S. troops pull out. the inflation and unemployment increase—all of which helps the politicians there who are encouraging anti-American sentiment.

Frustration

Cambodia is adding another element of frustration to the administration's concerns. The more the administration does, the mora it finds it has to do in Cambodia as elsewbere. Officials here keep saying they have achieved their military objectives in thet country, but the Lon No! government is weak and even with the help of the South Vietnamese forces. Cambodia is insisting on U.S. air support for Cambodian troops and demanding economic aid for the disruption of the U.S. bombing.

In short, the Nixon administration finds itself in a familiar bind What it calls its successes do not produce the results it expected It keeps winning almost every military battle, and it has managed to cut its casualties and cut down the antiwar protests, but fronically, the weaker the enemy gets, the less the enemy seems willing to negotiate from weakness, and Hanot now seems determined merely to carry on the war until a new situation is created by the withdrawal of the majority of the American

Another Question

One other thing troubling the administration is that officials here really don't know who is calling the tune in Hanol. This has been the case ever since the death of Ho Chi Minh. seven months has come full circle in its public pronouncements about its intentions in Cambodia.

The result is a growing suspicion in Congress as to whether President Nixon's "doctrine" really means a lower American profile in Southeast Asia.

Monday, while talking to newsmen aboard an airplane during his trip to Korea, Vice-President Agnew said, "We are going to do everything we can to help the Lon Not government' in Cambodia because "the whole matter of Cambodia is related to the security of our troops in Vietnam."

On Jan. 3, 1970, Mr. Agnew eemed to be saying just the opposite. Back then, during another Southeast Asian tour, he explainto newsmen why the Nixon administration had supported the congressional resolution barring use of ground combat troops in Laos or Thailand without congressional approval:

"I think that was simply a resolution to indicate that the President wouldn't move unilaterally to engage us in any conflict-further conflict in Asia beyond the Vietnam situation-without returning to the Congress for approval of

More Candor?

"I think it also indicated," he added in elaborating on the White House support of the restrictive amendment, "that we would not become involved in any other combat activities with our troops in Asia unless some very extreme, provocative and substantial action took place that might make it sary for him to seek reevaluation by the Congress."

Whether Mr. Agnew is being more candid now about the administration's intentions in Cambodis: whether the Nixon doctrine is really fust a name for day-today improvisation and not a structured doctrine at all; and whether the President's Southeast Asian policy has changed radically in seven months all are central of making it an active belligerent questions in the current debatea debate likely to keep escalating on through the November elections. Spokesmen at the White House, State Department and Pentagon all insist there has been no change in Nixon administration policy. Like a stretch sock which can fit over anything the expressed rationale is that President Nixon has made it clear all along that his actions in Cambodia have been and will be dictated by the regard for allied lives in South Vietnam. However, past public statements projected no such wide-open policy for American military involvement in Cambodia—a charge a growing ship that no one man is strong number of lawmakers are making. What follows is a sampling of Nixon administration statements on

Many of the more drastic possible steps, such as cut-ting diplomatic relations, would hurt the African countries more

But the hitterness and vehemence of the reaction from Africa has clearly surprised Prima Minister Heath's government. A series of meetings in East Africa this month involving Tanzania, Uganda, Zam-bla and Kenya indicates that retaliatory steps could extend to restrictions on trade and an effective dismantling of the last vestige of the British Empire, the Commonwealth. Some of the British surprise may stem from counting too much on the example of France, which has sold nearly half a billion dellars worth of military goods to South Africa since the 1964 British ban went into effect. There has been little criticism of France in Africa. This disparity has led to the charge of hypocrisy being leveled at the countries now berating Britain. But such a charge neglects the special relationship that exists between the two former great imperial powers in Africa and their ex-colonies.

Lack Leverage

For one thing, the former French colonies lack the leverage that the English-speaking countries have in dealing with Britain. For another, much of French-speaking Africa is quietly building up its own trade with South Africa. A ranking French diplomat stationed in Africa explains the silence of former French colonies on the arms sales this way: "They know that part of the money that goes to Paris will eventually get down to them. And they need the

BLONDIE

Obviously South has excellent chances of making four spades on the diagramed deal, but to find the "suretrick" play that guarantees the contract against any distribution is not easy. An opening bid of four spades is normal enough with the South hand, but this pre-emptive action might be made with a much weaker holding, especially in a favorable vulnerability situation. Some experts would, therefore, open one spade and reach the same final contract after a two-club response by North

The opening lead is the diamond king, and South must decide what to do next. As the cards lie he can make the contract by leading to the club ace and ruffing out East's king, using a trump entry to dummy subsequently. But that play could fail if West held the club king, for the declarer might lose a club, a spade and two hearts.

An immediate finesse of the club queen would also be risky, for there would be a similar danger of losing four tricks. As the cards lie, East would win and return a spade. West would win the spade king and give the declarer a guess by leading a

East and West were vul-nerable. The bidding: South West North East Pass Pass Pass West led the diamond

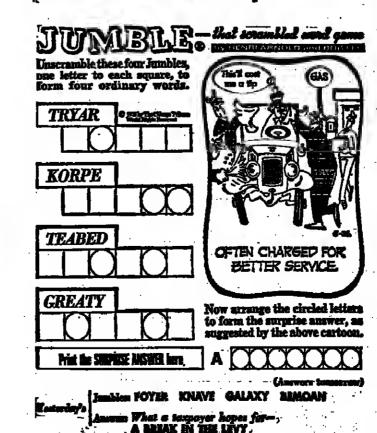

Another try is to lead a heart to the king at the second trick. But when East wins he plays a spade, and South eventually loses a spade and two more hearts.

The play that makes sure of 10 tricks is to lead to the club ace at the second trick and play the heart four. If East wins this trick, South will have a heart trick coming to him. And if West wins, he cannot hurt South with a trution lead. However the cards lie, the defenders will only be able to stop the third-round heart ruff in dummy at the cost of sacrificing the spade king.

THE TWILIGHT OF THE PRESIDENCY

By George E. Reedy. An NAL Book. The World Public

Reviewed by Max Frankel

WHY did Lyndon Johnson, an obviously shrewd politician. end up a political failure? We have to thank George Reedy, who worked with him as press secretary and special assistant before the heady climb and hapless fall, for posing the question as a vital issue of American government and no longer just a biographical curiosity.

Co. 205 pp. $6.95.

Many, of course, deny the premise or the need for historical generalization. The Kennedy people doubted that Lyndon Johnson ever possessed much political skill; a legislative manipulator, they scoffed, who fell into the White House and then lucked into Goldwater. The Mc-Carthy people blamed Vietnam, plain and simple. The old John-son circle of Texas and Capitol Hill saw tragedy in a betraval of his heritage and common sense, in his deadly embrace of the civil-rights and labor crowds up North. The Johnson loyalists who went down with the ship accepted their captain's judg-ment that he knowingly chose the unpolitical course because it was right, and that his heroism. passed unnoticed because he lacked style, spoke in a South-ern drawl and incurred the opposition of an ignorant and hissed communications industry.

Reedy's alarming answer, however, in one of the most thoughtful and stimulating essays on American government. is that the imperial fortress we call the White House is bound to deny the occupant all contact with reality, to encourage his most immature impulses, to deprive him of all normal sense of life in America and to cheat him even of the chance to learn from his mistakes.

We designed the office, Reedy says, when we thought the nation needed stability more than flexibility, endowed it with monarchical powers, and then, in misguided deference to its burdens, sealed off the throne room from real contact with rival power, including the will of the people. "It is only an inference, but an inescapable one," he concludes, "that the White House is an institution which dulls the sensitivity of political men and ultimately reduces them to bungling amateurs in their basic craft—the art of politics."

Reedy exempts Franklin Roosevelt because he seemed somebow. capable of learning from error and keeping his court in such a turnoil of rival-ries that intomation from afar could still seep through to his intuitions. I suspect that he exempts Roosevelt also because that is his private way of telling Lyndon Johnson that he failed to measure up to his idol and failed to grasp his methods. Reedy's whole thesis is a coy copout, a puffed up generalization to make more gentle his indictments of the man he long served as aide in the Senate and press secretary and adviser at the White House. But I

LONDON.—Who should we run into outside Madame Tussaud's but Harry, the wellknown expatriate. Harry, you may recall, is the excessively conscientious semanticist who left America because be did not, in any sense of the word that satisfied his respect for verbal precision, love it.

"I liked America." h 🛎 explained once.

"I enjoyed it. Baker respected it a great deal, admired it, took pleasure in it. and thrilled with nationalistic pride to the spirited playing of American martial airs, but I had to be honest with myself: none of these feelings was love." Harry realized that due to the incomplete state of his emotional relationahip with America, there was nothing he could do in good conscience but leave lt. Unless, of course, he wanted to be in contempt of bumper stickers.

He has since lived here for some time, not altogether happily. He missed certain things to which he had become accustomed and which could be found only at home. He was, he said, homesick for a television set which, when turned on, produced extraordinary dialogues about laundry and the more efficient cleansing of the bodily cavities, dialogues conducted between terrifying women gushing with insincere enthusiasm.

"But surely there is ample gushing ou British commercial TV. Harry,"

"Here they don't even make the effort to conceal their insincerity." he said. "What else are you homesick for, Harry? "I miss the spectacle of huge. overfed kids dressed like burns aud beggars, with hair down to the clavicle and . . ' "Oh come on, Harry, Piccadilly Circus is filled with kids like that." "But not driving $5,000 cars hurt so much." A large tear ran down the tip of his nose. "I miss all eorts of people pointing their fingers out of my television set at me while telling me how intensely they hate me. Black people. Young people. Old people. White people. The silent majority. The noisy minority. The . . . ".

"Listen. Harry. now listen. Pull yourself together, fellow. All those people still hate you. or at least they're still there on the old telly back home pointing their fingers and saying they still hate you. If you come back it will still be the same."

Harry struggled to smile. "I know, I know," he said. "Still, I miss waking up every morning and finding my front lawn littered with empty beer cans. With the beer cans, you know, I always felt that even if nobody loved me, even if nobody ehowed up on the television one day to point a finger and say how much they hated me, at least there was somebody who was absolutely callous towards me. Or at least towards my front lawn," The memory of this faithful dally evidence that somewhere there were indeed such persons was moving. It was hard not to join Harry in a sob, and It was very important to get away from him, poor sentimental devil, before he had us both in tears. Harry not love America? Any bumper sticker in the country would let him back in at a glance.

Bucher Criticizes Navy —But Wants to Stay In

By Warren L. Nelson

WASHINGTON (UPI).—Twenty months after being released from captivity in North Korea, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, ekipper of the spy ship Pueblo. has become an author, regained the weight be lost in prison and developed a paunch.

His growing bay window is not unexpected for a man of 43. The book (IET, Aug. 19) is something else again. In it, the officer who hopes he still has a career in the Navy, argues that it was Navy bungling that led to the capture of the USS Pueblo on Jan. 23, 1968.

"Bucher: My Story" was published this month by Doubleday. To promote it Cmdr. Bucher took leave and came to Washington where he spent two hours in the Pentagon book store one day autographing copies for long lines of the

He was unable to resist the tempta-tion to inscribe "Go Navy!" in copies bought by uniformed Army and Air Force officers.

Cites Bureaucracy

In an interview with UPI, Cmdr. Bucher said a combination of incomnetent naval officers and a bureaucracy that would not bend led to the capture of the Pueblo and its 83 officers and

Although the military currently is under fire for overspending, Cmdr. Bucher said one problem with the spy ahip program was that it was run on a shoestring. The graying commander said some unknown person floated the initial idea for dispatching ships weighed down with intricate electronic gear to listen in on Soviet radio and radar frequencies. Then a staff study was made and the plan approved at the highest level. The plan was rated a "minimum-risk operation" since the ships always would remain in international waters and the Soviets respected the freedom of the seas.

Even more important: The Russians operated eimilar electronic spy ships off the American coasts. The U.S. planners reasoned that the Russians would never touch an American spy ship because unarmed Soviet counterparts would be susceptible to retaliation.

Later the spy ship mission was changed to include nosing around off the Chinese and North Korean coasts. This created risks which had not been envisioned in the original staff study But no one reworked the staff study," Cmdr, Bucher said. "It was assumed that since approval came from high up in the joint chiefs of staff that they knew what they were doing."

Cmdr. Bucher said that when he was given command of the Pueblo he asked that the "minimum risk" evaluation be changed and that protective measures be taken, including installation of equipment to destroy classified documents quickly, and a reduction in the tremendous volume of secret papers carried aboard ship.

"Every recommendation I made was put into effect after our capture," Cmdr. Bucher caid. "It was the old closingthe-barn-door routine."

He lost a lot of weight in a North Korean brison, and returned home a gaunt shadow of the man who played football in his days at Boys Town, Neb. But in the 20 months since his release he has regained the lost poundage and then some.

"That'e my fault," said his wife, Rose, pointing to the paunch. "That's a lotta beer," said the commander,

At the Pentagon book store, managers counted more than 1,200 people entering the etore in the first hour. Some 30,000 people work in the Pentagon. Hundreds of people just etood and gawked at the once obscure naval commander now turned celebrity. Many brought over books to be autographed, shook Cmdr. Bucher's hand and wished him good luck.
"I was with you all the way," said

"I liked the way you handled the situation," said a man. But all was not sweetness and light

One bystander asked her companion, "Shall we buy a book?" "No. no," was the other woman'e reply.

"He's a traitor." Cmdr. Bucher still believes that the United States made a mistake in not retaliating against the North Koreans immediately after they seized the lightly armed Pueblo. He said servicemen expect the government to back them up when they are in trouble and U.S. failure to act in the Pueblo case was a tremendous blow to morale.

He said he knew of a number of aviators who turned in their wings and made it clear they were thoroughly disgusted-and that doesn't mean they were spoiling for a fight."

Cmdr. Bucher has rapidly become proficient at the autograph business, signing "best wishes" and "warmest regards" to books held out by smiling strangers. It is a far cry from the grim months in a small Korean prison when he and his men used the 'Hawaiian good luck sign."

In his book, Cmdr. Bucher tells the story of the "Hawaiian good luck sign"— an upraised fist with the middle finger extended. This familiar U.S. gesture was unknown in North Korea and the Pueblo crewmen told their captors it meant "good luck" in Hawaiian. A famous picture released by the North Koreans showed a number of sallors with their middle fingers extended to give the lie to tha happy smiles that they were ordered by their captors to display.

However, shortly before their release, a copy of Time magazine with the picture and a caption saying the finger sign proved the photo to be other than what the North Koreans claimed, made its way to their captors. For a week the officers and crew got the roughest beatings and kickings they were to suffer in their entire captivity. That ended the "Hawaiian good luck sign" game.

Assignment

Cmdr. Bucher is now assigned to the Naval Postgraduate School at Monterey. Calif., taking a management course that will earn him a master's degree. However, in March he was put on limited duty for six months by a medical board as a result of the malnutrition, beatings and strain of his ordeal.

He will soon go before the medical board again. How he fares there may determine the course of his naval career. He could be given disability retirement Asked if he still has a career in the Navy in the wake of the Pueblo case and his own criticism of the Navy hierarchy, Cmdr. Bucher said, "I hope so. I'm still a highly qualified naval officer.' It remains to be seen if the Navy feels the same way about the man who wrote. that the official inquiry into the Pueblo case "left a few holding the sack for the many who are gutless."

PEOPLE:

As previewed last weekend and reported briefly here yesterday, Monday's wedding of Peter Sellers and Mhanda Quarry was just an old-fashioned affair, at least as far as the groom was concerned. A bit surprisingly, however, the sometimes . flamboyant British comedian, 44, was upstaged in the ten-minute civil ceremony by his 28-year-old bride, stepdaughter of former government minister and Cunard Line director Lord Mancroft.

"Usually a mod dresser", reported UPI, "Sellers wore a conservative black pinstripe suit, plain blue shirt and solid red tie," ("His salt-and-pepper hair curled down over his collar." added UPI somewhat gratuitously. So what do you expect from Sellers, paprika?) Miranda, meanwhile, sported "a rich puce-colored gypsy-style maxi-dress with slightly plung-ing black bodice, a black velvet hat with floppy brim and flowing puce scarf high black boots, two wedding rings ("one is Russian and symbolizes love, fidelity and happiness; the second is platinum, which goes with my engagement ring") and a pair of Pekingese doge called Thomasina and Taifets described by their mistress as "my bridesmaids."

"They were very quiet during the ceremony," said Lon-don registrar Donald Boreham, who performed the ceremony. tolerate well-behaved animals but there are limits," he added. "My predecessor declined to marry a couple until they took away a large paper bag at their feet. In the bag was a cobra.

Back to the bridesmaids. though: Miranda affirmed that "I take them everywhere, just everywhere," presumably including the ten-day honeymoon cruise aboard Sellers'e yacht to the south of France starting this weekend. To Peter, Miranda, Thomasina and Taffeta, then, bon voyage and best wishes, and forgive us if we are reminded of a particularly poignant vignette from Irwin Shaw'e "Two Weeks in Another Town":

In the novel, actor Jack Andrus has just married actress Carlotta Lee, whose most faithful companion was "a huge Belgian shepherd (occasionally called Buster but usually referred to as "the goddam dog" J that she took with her almost everywhere."

"Buster," writes Shaw, "had been the occasion of a dispute wben Jack had just moved in. He's got to get out of the room, Jack had said, while we're making love." " 'He's very quiet,' Carlotta had said

"I don't care how quiet he is, Jack said. He lies there breathing and watching. I can never get over the feeling that he'e either going to bite me in the ass or sell the story to the newspapers." * * * rence Olivier, 63, who was admitted to a London hospital three weeks ago with bronchial pneumonia, suffered a subsequent blood clot, and will make no theater appearances for the next few months. Sir Laurence, who will start on a month's vacation this weekend, was per-forming in "The Merchant of at Cambridge when stricken. (Robert Land will suo as Shylock when the play returns to the Old Vic Oct. 161 Since Sir Laurence is etill scheduled to play Nathan Detroit in "Guys and Dolls," due to open towards the end of the year, the Old Vic appropriately has cancelled his three September performances of Dance of Death." UP: The j.g. for Raymond Dubois-Gache. 43, who admitted to Paris police that he had committed 3,000 lunchhour burglaries in the last 14 years for an average annual income of $7,200. Asked by the gendarmes what be did when accosted during his 12-to-1 p.m. rummages through Paris offices, Dubois-Gache explained that his feol-proof ploy, a sor! of Gallic version of "Jacks to Open." was to say: "I am looking for Miss Varlet," then split.
